Beijing will make public within the next couple of months a proposal to hold talks with Taipei through national reunification councils of the two sides, according to the Far Eastern Economic Review.

B1 A5

The PRC proposal - a departure from previous insistence on party-to-party talks - was originally to have been made by Communist party leader Jiang Zemin in a New Year's statement but was postponed at the last minute. Reacting to the story, Beijing said there had been no change in policy; Taipei reiterated it would hold talks on reunification only if Beijing pledged never to use force, stopped isolating the island, and recognized Taiwan as a legitimate political entity.
